Many Prominent Educators Were in Town Last ty Phillips, Maggie Sanford Week-Entertainments for Miss Hazard-Card Parties, Dinners and Musicals-Notes.

Visitors and entertainments for them oc- | Nanie and Mamie Tompkins and Relda Gat-Cupied last week to a large extent. The Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Hubbard were near presence in town of many prominent educators, a large proportion of whom were women, has naturally resulted in the planning of semisocial affairs for them. Miss Caroline Hazard, president of Wellesley College, received perhaps the greatest an ount of social attention. There was little time during her three days' visit that was not occupied by some entertainment or other given for her by the various clubs who felt especially honored by her com-

Miss Hazard exemplified during her visit that a woman may be president of one of the largest colleges for women in the country, may have received three degrees from Institutions of learning for her advanced scholarship, and may be the successful author of several valuable works on historical and philosophical subjects-and still know how to dress tastefully and handsomely. The black velvet costume worn on Friday night at Hosmer Hall, with its bodice trimmed in rate old thread lace, the pattern outlined in a little jet, and the neck cut away slightly to reveal a firm white throat encircled with a single strand of perfectly matched pearls, indelibly stamped, Miss Hazard in the minds of her audience that evening as a woman of good tarte and broad mind.

The coming fortnight-made up of Passion and Holy Weeks-is not likely to be marked Entertainments for Miss Caroline Hazard, president of Wellesley College, continued during yesterday, beginning with an in-formal morning affair, given by Mrs. Frederick Lehmann, her hostess, at the Leh-mann residence, No. 10 Benton place. Mem-bers of the Collegiate Alumnae Association were invited to meet Miss Hazard on this occasion. Some of them were; Mrs. Tre-lease, University of Wisconsin; Mrs. Baum. occasion. Last evening the Wednesday Club gave a large reception for Miss Hazard at their clubrooms in the Y. M. C. A. building. Several hundreds of the representative people of St. Louis, as well as many of the visitors who are in town this week, were asked to meet the college president. The rooms were tastefully arranged with spring flowers and palms, and refreshments were served during the evening. Miss Hazard, as guest of honor, occupied a position at the right of Mrs. Frank Richey, who received, with the other officers of the club. Miss Hazard did not, as on the previous evening, read a paper, and the entertainment was in all respects purely social.

PECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Hot Spring, Ark., March 29.—The last of Hot Spring, Ark., March 29.—The last of the great events which have made the so-cial life of Hot Springs this season the most builtant in its history was the annual ball at the Park Hotel on Monday evening. Everything tended to make it a success. The entrance was turned into a hower of roses and climbing vines, From the heart of each rese flashed a thry electric light and through this bit of fairyland the guests passed to the hall of festivilles. On the inand through this passed to the hall of festivities. On the in side the hall was festooned with wild climbers and thousands of pink roses, the whole illuminated with scores of incandescendights. The chandeliers were trimmed with lights. The chandeliers were trimmed with the prevailing colors, pink and green, and scattered about in the alcoves and corners were ferms and palms without stint. The unique feature of the evening was the announcement of the dames by means of colored electric lights, so arranged that the "two-step" or "waltz" would appear in illuminated letters alternately.

Manager Captain Jackson spared ne labor or expense to make the pleasure of his or expense to make the pleasure of his guests complete, and both he and Mrs. Spencer, who decorated the hall, were complimented on all sides on the artistic character of the work acter of the work.

The art section of the Wednesday Club, has instituted a series of lectures, illus-trating Paris and its art, at the Wednes-lay club rooms, by Mrs. Blattner, a member of the section. As an extra, and at the request of the members of the art section, a lecture was given the afternoon of March at Memorial Hall. The source of interest a lecture was given the afternoon of March 21 at Memorial Hall. The source of interest was Arnold Boecklin.

The slides, by means of which the lecture in honor of the birthday of their son, Professor Charles Kaub, Music was the feature

Blattner's supervision while abroad, and are the only Boeckiin illustrations in America.
From a large collection, about fifty were presented and interpreted. It seemed to those who followed the procession of compositions, that some old Greek had strayed into the Nineteenth Century, and had repeopled wood and meadow and wave with guardian deities.

Mrs. Blattner said that while Boecklin helonged to no school, he exercised a trem nlonged to no school, he exercised a trem nlonged to no school, he exercised a frem nodous influence on the contemporary art and literature of Germany, Still so unique is his genius that he stands among those rare souls that may be imitated, but not equaled. His greatest charm is exercised through color. In his Pieta the bine drapery of the mother was characterized as the em-of the mother was characterized as the em-bodiment of the gloom of death. To Mrs. Blattner belongs the honor of introducing an American audience to Boecklin. Her presentation of the subject was scholarly. Mrs. Stone, president of the Modern Novel Club, discussed "America's Attitude To-ward Work in the Sense of Manual Labor" at the last meeting of the club. She said, among other things that the Modern Novel Club studies the "forces" which influence the life of to-day—among them human na-ture—wherever these are successfully pre-sented in fiction ented in fiction. I think indeed that Americans are prone to believe that when recognition is asked for the worker, it is always on the social plane, though there are so many more important considerations than this same soportant considerations than this same so-cial plane. Wherever the worker is to be excluded, however, I do think we should take pains to make it plain that it is not on account of the occupation, because this means to degrade work; and as long as work is degraded, only those who cannot help it will work, and these are never the ones who can dignify work work is degraded, only those who cannot help it will work, and these are never the ones who can dignify work.

"In the arts and professions there are many persons with whom one does not wish to associate, but it is never because they are artists or doelors or lawyers, but because they are uncongenial. It is the belief that some are meant to do the drudgery and others to evade it, which has brought about our present conditions.

"Edward Bellamy struck the keynote of the situation in 'Looking Backward' when he had every woman and man of the Twentieth Century serve a term of three years at manual labor, after each had been given the same chance for an education and the opportunity to take it. This would inmediately dignify work; and once dignitied, we can then demonstrate that the only worker who is inferior is one who works in a slovenly and disgraceful manner."
